From last year's cases, you'd think 2008 was the year of the bull: little guys standing up for themselves all over our federal judiciary against well-heeled rights owners. Some succeeded, some... well, let's just say some succeeded. From new TTAB rules to settlement (finally!) of copyright compulsory licensing issues, more copyright termination cases than sticks Lassie could possibly retrieve, the CDA/DMCA/OCILLA and the rest of the alphabet (including the ubiquitous Google keywords cases), and cross-border rights questions (Renoir, anyone?), 2008 was a veritable judicial smorgasbord of copyright and trademark litigation. In this seminar, we'll go over the most notable decisions from 2008, and learn how they affect our practice in 2009.
